Dear Padre'... Question: What is the Source of Catholic Beliefs?

I'd like to summarize it in two groups of four. The Catechism of the Catholic Church teaches that if a Catholic or anyone intends to understand the essential & fundamental contents of the Catholic faith, that person needs to look to the source in order to understand and have reference.

The first group of four are: The Sacred Scriptures, The Fathers of the Church, The Liturgy, and The Church's Magisterium. The second group of four: The Creed, the Sacraments, the Commandments, and lastly prayer.

In looking to the contents of the faith one is able to see and express better to live the tradition and practice of the Church, then one will inevitably be led to a firm and life-giving practice of what it means to be a Catholic. The whole of the parts becomes the complete.

~Padre Jerry
