Fr. Michael's Musings

Sometimes I hear complaints about Memorial Day. I hear people complain that it has become more about the beginning of summer and barbecues than it is about remembering those who died for our nation.

I suppose part of that is true, but it probably doesn't help to guilt people who are enjoying a well-earned day off into remembering either.

Rather, let's look at Memorial Day this way. The women and men we honor this weekend died not just for the ideals of freedom, but for freedom.

Because of this gift, preserved by their blood, we are able to take time off, relax, enjoy grilling with family and friends, golf, have a beer, fish, watch a game, all these things.

We can honor our brothers and sisters who died for us by joyfully living the life they died defending. And then, in the midst of that joy, we pause, we remember, we say "thank you" and we allow their sacred memory to touch us. We owe them that; and our children deserve to be taught this lesson as well...to remember and say "thank you."

Just a Thought...
