What a wonderful gift we have received these past days to have the our Holy Father walk with us in the United States, blessing us with his words, his presence and, well, with his blessings!

I am always amazed at how, in this nation, we tend to view everything through the very narrow lens of politics. It is, after all, one of those things we cannot avoid, given that our nation didn't really evolve over the years, but was born from a political convention.

Because we have this tendency, it is easy sometimes for us to accept, or dismiss, what the Holy Father says, or teaches, if it does, or does not, match our personal political persuasion.

If you get a chance sometime in the next few days, jump online and read some of the Holy Father's many addresses from these last days. Read them unfiltered from the punditry of the 24-hour news madness, and just allow your father and shepherd to speak to you.

He has the voice of a prophet and the heart of a shepherd; that is why the Holy Spirit gave him to us.

I remember and treasure the beautiful words the Holy Father spoke at the end of his address as President Obama welcomed him on behalf of us all: "God bless America."
