Every Life Deserves A Lifetime ~ Heartbeat of Lima invites you to their 6th annual fundraising banquet on Thursday, October 15th at the Veterans Memorial Civic & Convention Center, 7 Town Square in Lima. Social hour begins at 6:00 p.m. with the dinner and program from 7:00 - 9:00 p.m. The dinner is complimentary with an opportunity to make a financial gift. The keynote speaker is Eileen Smith. If you are interested in hosting a table or attending the banquet, please call Heartbeat of Lima at 419-222-7945.

Eileen Smith received a "Baptism of Fire" and became a crusader for the Pro-Life movement almost overnight when her 22 yr old adopted daughter, Laura, died during an abortion procedure on Sept. 13th, 2007. Laura was raised in a Christian, pro-life home and was pro-life throughout her life. The moment Eileen heard of her death, she prayed that the Lord would bring something good out of her death so she could bear it. Faithful to answer prayer, the Lord set about giving Eileen opportunity to speak about Laura's story all over the country almost immediately and with amazing results.

Eileen has said the rest of her life will be spent for LIFE as she tirelessly travels with her message. "Every time I speak, I believe I put another nail in the coffin of the abortion industry. Abortion can end in our lifetime."

Laura's story is one that will move you as you hear the "beauty from ashes" as told from a mother's heart. Eileen's desire is to speak to pastors, parents, educators and adolescents with her message. Even those already active in the Pro-life movement have told her they have been energized and recommit themselves with new fervor to the cause after hearing her speak.

A Note from Fr. Tom

ONE HUNDRED YEARS! More than 100 years ago, our first pastor, Father John Theis had the foresight to erect a building that could house a Catholic school. The original parishioners shared his vision and generously supported it. After a few years of existence without a Catholic school, Saint Anthony Parish obtained the services of the Sisters of the Precious Blood who then for many years constituted the Saint Anthony faculty. These generous, faith-filled women undertook the hardship of beginning a school “from scratch” in a community that did not always support Catholic institutions. Over the years, the original building was demolished and new buildings were built. Lay principals and lay faculty members continued the tradition of generous service. Parishioners over the years have matched the support that their ancestors gave the school. Children of four generations have brought life and joy to our community as they strove to learn the Three R’s, as well as the all-important fourth R, religion. Happy birthday to all of you; let’s resolve that we will do our part to make sure that one day there will be a strong Saint Anthony School celebrating its bicentennial.

THE POPE’S TRIP: The Pope’s recent visit to the United States brought joy and encouragement to almost everyone, Catholic or not. We’ll have an opportunity on November 11 to get feedback on the World Meeting of Families and the papal visit from the Leipsic family who received a diocesan scholarship to attend. That gathering will take place in the evening in Kalida. More details are coming.

Unfortunately, the Pope’s visit brought out the worst in the Letters to the Editor section of the Lima and Findlay newspapers. The Lima letter is hardly worth commenting on. In fact it may have been a satire, hauling out every cobweb-covered insult that has been used against Catholics for centuries. A lot of it seemed to be centered on the word “lucifer,” the Latin word that means “morning star.” The Easter Vigil at St. Peter’s was celebrated in Latin, as you would expect in a church with a multi-national congregation. In the Easter proclamation, the deacon sang in Latin, “Christ, the morning star that never sets....” In Latin that was “Christus lucifer...,” but definitely not a Satanic reference. Go buy a Latin dictionary, people. And it seems that in his homily, the Pope used the word “illuminati,” which is Italian for “illuminated.” I know almost no Italian, but I’m sure the Pope wasn’t giving a shout-out to any secret Masonic group.

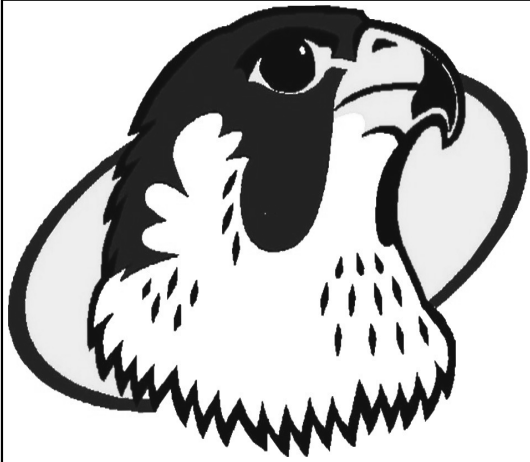

The letter also lambastes the Pope for forgiving abortion and homosexual acts. Well, sorry. In this Church we’re all about forgiving people who repent. We got that way from reading the Gospels.

The letter to the editor in the Findlay paper wasn’t as bad, but it had misconceptions of its own. It claims that the Pope in his younger days was schooled “by Jesuits in French universities” and learned liberation theology. I read three standard biographies of the Pope on line, and they agreed that his education took place in mainly in Argentina and Chile. He began PhD studies in Germany, but that only lasted a short time, and he never completed his doctorate. I’m sure the Pope is no liberation theologian, but as anti-Marxist as the Popes before him. You could pick that up from his speech in Cuba, where he said that we are not called to serve a system, but instead to serve people, especially the least ones. The same outlook is present in his encyclical on the environment.

The Findlay writer claims that the Pope is in favor of world government. It is true that in his recent encyclical on the environment, he calls for enforceable treaties on things like dumping pollutants in international waters, and for more research on causes of climate change with greater cooperation between nations. But interestingly enough, he opposes carbon exchanges. In this regard, the Pope is definitely not a conservative Republican, but then he’s not supposed to be. He isn’t saying that his view of the environment is the only possible Catholic view, but he is laying out some solid scholarship for us to consider.

Does the Pope call for the abolition of nation states in favor of world government? I think I’ve kept up on Papal statements pretty well ever since I got a computer, and I haven’t seen the evidence yet. The Findlay writer will have to show me. By the way, I get most of my Catholic news at www.newadvent.org, and I can heartily recommend this service.
