A WORD FROM THE PASTOR

(Part II) Lewis and Clark arrived at the Pacific Ocean on November 7, 1805. The “corps” built Fort Clatsop and spent the winter there, returning to St. Louis in September 1806. When word of the fur trade in the northwest reached the ears of John Jacob Astor, a New York merchant, he took an immediate interest. His first ship arrived at the mouth of the Columbia River in March 1811. His crew established the first American settlement in the northwest, calling it Astoria. The history of the Oregon country begins.

The fur trade continued to grow, and the Hudson’s Bay Company sent Dr. John McLoughlin (1784-1857) to Oregon in 1824 as its chief factor. Prior to this, in 1818, Great Britain and the United States agreed that, for a period of ten years, the citizens and subjects of each nation would have equal access to the Oregon country. This arrangement lasted until 1846, when the boundary between Canada and the United States was set at the 49th parallel. Central to the history of this early period is Dr. McLoughlin, and he is rightly called the “Father of Oregon.” It was his decision to move the headquarters of the Hudson’s Bay Company from Astoria to Fort Vancouver in 1825.

Dr. McLoughlin was baptized Catholic in Quebec, Canada, but was raised Anglican. He returned to the Catholic Church in his later years. He had a towering physical presence, matched only by his honesty, leadership, and warm hospitality. When the terms of some of his employees at the Hudson’s Bay Company expired, Dr. McLoughlin supplied them with provisions and farm implements and sent them into the Willamette Valley. They settled in a place called French Prairie, near the current town of St. Paul. These French Canadians were Catholic, and many had married native women. They longed for the sacraments of the Church, for marriage, and for the baptism of their children.

With that in mind, and at the suggestion and encouragement of Dr. McLoughlin, the settlers wrote to Bishop Joseph-Norbert Provencher in Winnipeg, Manitoba, in 1834 and 1835, asking that priests might be sent to those living in the Willamette Valley. The bishop said that he had no priests at Red River (Winnipeg) but that he would forward their petition to Archbishop Joseph Signay in Quebec. The archbishop ultimately decided to send two priests to the Oregon country, though the Hudson’s Bay Company objected to the establishment of a mission south of the Columbia River, whose sovereignty was disputed by the American and English governments. It was agreed by all parties that the mission would be established north of the Columbia, on the banks of the Cowlitz River (near present day Longview).

Father Francis Norbert Blanchet was given charge of the mission in Oregon, and he was appointed Vicar General to the archbishop of Quebec. Fr. Blanchet’s jurisdiction was from the Rocky Mountains on the east to the Pacific Ocean on the west. Father Modeste Demers was appointed his assistant. The Catholic Church in the Northwest had begun.

If you have a four-year-old ready for Pre-Kindergarten next year, there is a spot for your child at Cathedral!
