Everyday Martyrdom

The witness of others has a decisive impact. And our witness to others is a vital part of Christianity.

In fact the term "martyr" means "witness." And we are all called to martyrdom. Most of us won't die a violent death for our faith, but each one of us is called to set the world on fire for Christ through a little death to our own selfishness towards others.

The poet T.S. Eliot speaks of a "Lifetime's death in love, ardor and selflessness, and self-surrender." St Therese of Lisieux wrote about the hundreds of tiny pin-pricks we endure every day, which are a call to love.

There's an everyday martyrdom to which we're all called.

It means smiling at someone when we feel lousy.

It means a kind word when we feel like biting someone else's head off.

It means refusing to give in to bitterness or hatred towards someone who's hurt us, and instead choosing to forgive that person.

Those little acts of witness to Christ's love – of martyrdom – help to set the world on fire with love.

As we receive Jesus in the Eucharist, let's ask him to set our hearts on fire with his love for us and for all people, and to give us the strength to reveal that love in everything we do.
