Avoiding Moral Compromise

The author of the Letter to the Hebrews tells us exactly how we can apply this to our lives.

He writes:

"Endure your trials as 'discipline'... Make straight paths for your feet, that what is lame may not be disjointed but healed."

What does this mean?

When God sends or permits trials, we often react by rebeling.

In the spiritual life, we are like children who don't appreciate the value of discipline.

So when following Christ's path becomes uncomfortable, when his gate becomes too narrow, we start looking around for shortcuts.

We think to ourselves, "Jesus promises lasting happiness, but it seems so far away!"

And then we think about the people around us, and the people on television and in the movies.

They seem to be enjoying themselves so much.

They don't follow Christ's teaching, but they seem to be doing just fine.

And that's when we start to compromise in our moral lives.

We cut corners on Church teaching in little ways that no one will notice.

We make little exceptions.

After all, we tell ourselves, everyone else is doing it.

And so we step off the straight path traced out by the Ten Commandments and the Catechism - that sure and dependable path that our conscience always points too.

We prefer the winding "shortcut".

But today, God is reminding us that there are no shortcuts; His will is a narrow gate, but it's the only way to the fulfillment we long for.

He has armed us to resist those temptations and "make straight paths" for our feet.

When Jesus comes to strengthen us in Holy Communion, let's thank him for reminding us that behind every tribulation is his wisdom and love, and let's promise him that this week, we will stick to the sure path of his will.
