Exercising the Virtue of Hope

Some of us may already know what our cross is.

Maybe it is weighing heavily on our shoulders even right now.

If that's the case, then we can be sure God is speaking directly to us today.

He is reminding us that we aren't carrying that cross alone.

Every one of our crosses is actually a small piece of his cross, a small part for each one of us to play in the great drama of the redemption of the world.

He can remind us of that, as he does today, but that reminder in itself doesn't lessen our load.

For that to happen, we have to pay attention to the reminder.

We have to consciously, deep in our hearts, unite our crosses to Christ's, to exercise the rare but essential virtue of hope.

Hope is the assurance of things unseen.

Hope is the assurance, the deep conviction, that when Christ sends us crosses, he has his reasons.

This week, when we feel the weight of the cross digging in to our shoulders, let's lift our gaze to heaven, confident that whatever we suffer here on earth in union with our Lord is a secure deposit in the bank of eternity, and will gain eternal dividends for us and for those we love.

And if even that thought is not enough to give us strength, if even today's reminder doesn't keep our hope aflame, we can always come back here and kneel before the Tabernacle, where Jesus is truly with us in the sacrament of the Eucharist. He has stayed here precisely because he knew that there would be times when the troubles of life put our faith and hope to the test.

When they do, he will be right here, ready to bolster us, if only we will come to be bolstered.
