FAREWELL

As Father Chapin moves on to his new assignment, we look back upon his years of service at our parishes. We have been blessed with his excellent homilies. When the floods ravaged our communities he stepped up and helped with the relief efforts, starting project Peaceful Slumber and opening the rectory to volunteer workers from around the country. With his fund raising assistance, St. Catherine's remodeled their kitchen and bathrooms. The parish hall at St. Charles got a new roof and a new chime system. Father C extended the Catholic presence in the community greatly through his ecumenical activities and television ministry.

Thank you and God bless you as you begin your new assignment.

What Does the Catholic Church Teach About...?

Question:

I was asked to explain the requirements for the type of wine that can be used for Holy Communion. I'm going to go one better. I'm going to explain the requirements for both Eucharistic Species, the bread and wine.

My Answer:

Why does the Church have requirements on the bread and wine? There's always a reason. Nothing in the Church is haphazard. Everything is ultra-specific and cannot be changed without investigation and discernment at the highest levels. The reason for unleavened wheat bread and fermented grapes comes from the fact that these are the elements used by Jesus Himself at the last supper when He says, 'Take and eat, this is my Body. Take and drink, this is my Blood'. Tradition! By the way. The Last Supper was a Seder Meal. Seder Meals require wine to be drunk.

Let me address the wine, which we call Sacramental Wine. First, it must be wine. That may seem straight forward, but it is a point the must be borne out. We cannot use grape juice. The wine used must be of the fruit of the vine and fermented. Thus other wine types, such as dandelion or rice or strawberry or cherry and on and on, cannot be used. Fruit of the vine is grape.

Now for the requirements. These come directly from the GIRM and Code of Canon Law.

322. The wine for the celebration of the Eucharist must be from the fruit of the vine (cf. Lk 22:18), natural, and unadulterated, that is, without admixture of extraneous substances.

§3 The wine must be natural, made from grapes of the vine, and not corrupt.[3]

This means that the wine must be naturally fermented with nothing added to it, and the wine itself cannot have soured or become vinegar, nor can it have anything artificial added to it (preservatives, flavours). Wines are made from Vitis vinifera grapes. While the Catholic Church generally adheres to the rule that all wine for sacramental use must be pure grape wine and alcoholic, it is accepted that there are some circumstances, where the priest is an alcoholic for example, where it may be necessary to use a wine that is only minimally fermented, called mustum.

How about the bread we use? Yes! Here are the requirements. It must be unleavened bread that contains wheat; that means gluten.

320. The bread for celebrating the Eucharist must be made only from wheat, must be recently made, and, according to the ancient tradition of the Latin Church, must be unleavened.

However, there are those who are gluten intolerant or may have Celiac Disease and cannot eat the standard host, so the Church has made allowances for this in providing a very low gluten content host. These low gluten hosts were developed and are provided by The Benedictine Sisters of Perpetual Adoration. As you might glean from their order name they are dedicated to the Most Blessed Sacrament in Adoration.

The Church upholds that Jesus is fully present, Body, Blood, Soul and Divinity in both species. It is not a requirement to receive both species in order to receive all of Jesus.
