Reflection on the Gospel

By Fr. Mark Escobar, C.S.

Jesus' Commandment to Love One Another

"Love one another as I love you. No one has greater love than this, to lay down one's life for one's friends. You are my friends if you do what I command you."

I remember as a young student when our school calendar has only days in a row before we mark the summer recess. It was a great deal of thumbing through the heart of our annual sojourn in the countryside; full of learning and growth especially in relationships. Good works and kindnesses of my loved ones, playmates, and family relations were considered of legendary proportions. Of course there were some hurdles, twists and turns, trials and tribulations that came along the way but, those experiences shaped my perspective in life, along with that language about friendship as I took my journey with many steps.

If we come to think of friendship as Jesus shows in today's gospel, there is a fundamental connection with love. In the New Testament (NT) a "friend" is immediately understood as "one who loves." We know Jesus gave everything to his friends. He told them about the reign of God and his knowledge of God, his own life and his vision for humanity. He loved without counting the cost and he made it possible for us to live a life of friendship that would transform us to holiness; to a life of discipleship.

Perhaps our concept of friendship is associated within the secular aspect of our lives. But the key passage in John's gospel is very important to keep in mind how the theology of friendship gets its prominence in relationship with God and one another. Jesus, the model of friendship, calls his disciples to love as he has loved. This is his commandment, his last will and testament.

Friendship in the Greek and Roman cultures was a great deal of studies as this had taken shape the life of the early Church and the NT writings. Classical philosophers embarked on that context combining love and friendship as inextricably linked to one another. It was like a very important subject and at the same time the language widely spoken with a sense of sacrifice; with many deeds of blood and battles and deaths for the sake of friends as described by Lucian, a Hellenistic philosopher and storyteller; with a gift of one's life for one's friends and the use of frank and open speech.

Viewed in this light, we have seen some key passages from John's gospel how Jesus depicted himself in an act of friendship 'who lays down his life for the sheep (10:11).' He focused himself in a metaphorical allusion as the Good Shepherd (10:11-18), the gate (10:1-2) and then on the sheepfold (10:3-5). He talked about himself, about the love that is the flesh and blood of friendship. He said, "For this reason the Father loves me, because I lay down my life in order to take it up again. No one takes it from me, but I lay it down on my own accord" (Jn 10:17-18a).
