From the Pastor's Desk

The call of Christ to His first disciples was in reality a call to all Christians. For some, it would mean direct preaching of the word, for others, their way of life would be directed in identifying themselves with Christ in His love, humility, suffering, and death. We have to be prepared to replace any romantic ideals of what it means to follow Christ with the hard reality of the cross. It means to agree, to feel, to buffer the pain of the world. It means to accept our powerlessness, to abandon our need to control, and to surrender ourselves, in faith, to His loving care.

We are to abandon those nets of guilt and despair due to our past failures that seem to separate us from being all we should be. To follow Him may lead us to Calvary, and we are fearful of our vulnerability and the dark. But we have the assurance that He is with us on the journey and will reach out and lift us up when we fail. All is passing but His love.
