From the Pastor's Desk

Jesus would be the last to suggest confusion and disorder in our services of worship, but He would also be the first to encourage responses of the heart to the Word of God.

This is what He meant when He accused the Pharisees of killing the Spirit with the words: "These people honor me with their lips but their hearts are far from me." The Pharisees certainly did not start out that way.

Washing of the hands in a ritual manner was a sign of cleanliness and preparation for the blessings of food which God had provided. But somewhere along the line of hundreds of years of this practice, the task became more important than the thanksgiving and it became an empty tradition carried on just for the sake of tradition.

Traditions govern almost every part of our lives and, by themselves, traditions are a wonderful tie to the gifts of those who have gone before us. That is, unless the traditions have become more important than the truths or the people they were originally designed to serve.

Mark 7:1-6,14-15,21-23

In the days of Jesus, the Pharisees had gotten to this point, and our Lord nailed them between their eyes because as He said, "Your lips speak of God, but your hearts are far from Him."
