YEAR OF MATTHEW

November 16th, 2014 33rd Sunday in Old Time

The Book of Proverbs is a collection of wise advice that was used for instruction in ancient Israel. Traditionally attributed to Solomon (see 1:1) because of his reputation for great wisdom, many of these sayings were originally intended for young men. Their inclusion in the biblical text gives them a wider audience: all people are called to seek and embrace the way of the wise. In today's reading we hear of the value of "a worthy wife"; this text is sometimes read at funerals as a tribute to a woman whose value is "far beyond pearls" (v10). The text reminds us of the importance of associating with good people in our lives.

Paul's letter to the Thessalonians reminds us that there is more to life than this world. As Christians we anticipate "the light," and so we are called to "stay alert and sober" (v6), not becoming distracted by unimportant things or falling into darkness. The apostle calls us to "encourage one another" (see v11) in our common faith.

In the parable of the talents, Jesus calls us to make good use of what we have been given. The talents given to each of the servants represent a great amount of money. One talent was equivalent to approximately 6,000 days' wages. Each servant was given a different amount, "according to his ability" (v15). The parable focuses on what each one did with the talents received. The master accuses the third servant of laziness. The third servant knew his master was demanding, but he didn't even put the money to work in what we would call a conservative financial plan – "in the bank" (v27) to accrue interest; he merely buried the talent in the ground (v25). Like him, we are called to make good use of what has been entrusted to us, for one day we will be called to give an accounting for our actions.

For reflection: What is my belief about the "day of the Lord"? How can I prepare for it?

Human Trafficking, From Mexico to New York: a panel presentation

Trafficking in persons is the fastest-growing criminal enterprise in the world. The International Labor Organization estimates that there are over 21 million people being trafficked worldwide today. That is more than the total number of people enslaved during the entire duration of the triangle trade. New York State, including the Hudson Valley, is a source, transit and destination region for both labor and sex trafficking. Gonzalo Martinez de Vedia wrote about this in the November issue of La Voz, here in Spanish and here in English.

La Voz magazine invites you to:

A panel presentation with Carl J. Boykin, attorney and Director of Human Trafficking at the Division of Criminal Justice Services of New York State; Juan Carlos Jimenez Luna, agricultural worker from Tamaulipas, Mexico, former victim of human trafficking in New York; Gonzalo Martínez de Vedia, from the human trafficking program at the Worker Justice Center, WJCNJ; and Ron Soodalter, historian and coauthor, together with Kevin Bales, of the book The Slave Next Door: Human Trafficking and Slavery in America Today.

Wednesday, November 12, 6:00 – 8:00 pm
